Warriors no more

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

West Sacramento no longer has a middle school.

Students filed out of Golden State Middle School for the final time last week. The campus will re-open as a partial-grade elementary school called "Riverbank."

Former faculty and staff of the middle school, and some of its students, marked the end of the 30-year era of the Golden State "Warriors" with a "wake" on Thursday. They passed out black armbands and sipped refreshments on the campus quad near Carrie Street. The atmosphere was festive but bittersweet.

Kathy Hiramoto, who started her career as a district speech therapist at Golden State, helped organize the unofficial ceremony. She now works at Elkhorn and Westfield elementary schools.

"We didn't like the way the school district handled the change, and we needed closure," said Hiramoto. "We're really disappointed there won't be a middle school in West Sacramento."

Until last year, the path for most West Sacramento kids was to attend an elementary school through sixth grade, then go to Golden State in the city's north area for seventh and eighth. Most students then finished up grades 9-12 at River City High School.

Several years ago, the district launched plans to build a new high school campus – and change the current high school into a second middle school. But plans evolved, and the middle school concept was later dropped.

The district is now emphasizing the inclusion of 7th and 8th grades within local "K-8" elementary schools. Graduates of those K-8 schools will then head to a single, comprehensive high school (a replacement high school is a half-year away from opening in Southport).

Hiramoto thinks the loss of a middle school is a shame.

"I think the kids need that transition from elementary school, when they're self-contained, to high school, where they're on their own," she said.

Hiramoto added that she felt Golden State was targeted for closure partly on the basis of poor student test scores – an unfair criticism, she said.

"Scores were better in the years when we had a stable administration, both in the board and (district) administration and here," said Hiramoto. "Things were best when we had a principal here for more than a year."

Cabaldon to seek another term as West Sac mayor

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

More than a million "independent" dollars were poured into both sides of the battle between West Sacramento Mayor Christopher Cabaldon and his Davis opponent, Mariko Yamada, as they fought to earn the Democratic party nomination to be the next 8th District Assembly representative. It shaped up to be one of the most expensive Assembly contests in the state.

But when Yamada edged Cabaldon in the low-turnout election last week, Cabaldon seemed to turn philosophical.

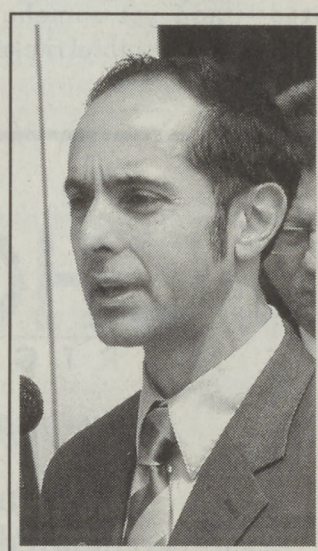

"Election night was disappointing in that we didn't prevail," he told the News-Ledger yesterday. "But it's an opportunity to focus on what I'm good at, in the community that did support me."

Cabaldon carried a majority of voters in West Sacramento, while Yamada, a Yolo County supervisor, carried her hometown of Davis. Yamada – supported by labor groups including teachers and nurses – took 51.9 percent of the total 8th District votes to Cabaldon's 48.1 percent. The difference was about 1,300 votes.

So it will be Yamada who runs for Assembly as the Democrats' nominee in November (and will likely win it, since the district leans to the "blue" side of the political spectrum). She will face Republican Manuel Cosme, unopposed in his party's primary last week.

Cabaldon will find something else to do.

"I do intend to run for

reelection for mayor in this community," he said. "We're at a critical front as far as economics and flood protection, for example."

One of his major financial supporters in the Assembly race was the nonprofit educational advocacy group EdVoice. Cabaldon quit his job as that group's top staffer to campaign. Now he's looking for a new career in addition to his public office in West Sacramento, and he has received "a lot of calls" from people with ideas.

"I completely severed all ties with my prior job to focus on the campaign," Cabaldon commented. "There are a lot of options and opportunities. I'm in the fortunate position to evaluate what I want to do."

That could include more public policy advocacy or some other career move. Or: "I could pick up my oboe and join an orchestra," he joked.

Meeting on biodiesel

A special community meeting to discuss a planned "biodiesel" fuel facility in West Sacramento has been scheduled for 5 p.m. on June 16 at city hall. The event will include an informal question-and-answer session to begin at 6 p.m.

The subject will be Primafuel and its plans to develop a 12.2 acre site near Terminal Street and Industrial Boulevard at the Port of Sacramento. The plant will handle cargo including biofuels, vegetable oils and other materials by rail and water.

Mike Luken, director of the Port of Sacramento, reports that the project is partly funded by the California Air Resources Board and will promote the port's plans for "green" growth. Biodiesel, he said, can be a "clean fuel" that is "part of the solution to global warming."

The meeting will be held in the first floor galleria room at city hall, 1110 West Capitol Avenue.

Board discusses superintendent

School board members of the Washington Unified School District will meet Thursday, beginning at 5:30 p.m. at city hall.

Closed-session discussion items include the personnel evaluation (and possible discussion of a contract extension) for Superintendent Steven Lawrence.

Open-session discussion items include the labor group proposal for 2008-2009 from the district's "classified" staff employees.

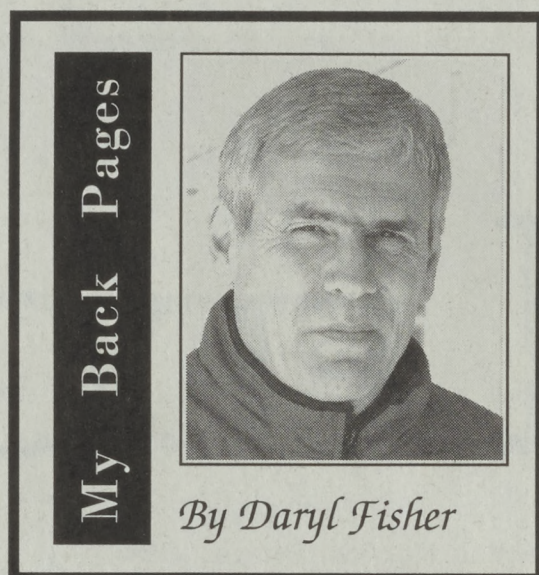

What's your best high school memory?

Another high school graduation weekend has come and gone. Seventeen and eighteen-year old students all over the nation have marched down the aisles, endured weeks of hearing Pomp and Circumstance being played over and over again, tried hard to write down something funny and memorable in all their friend's yearbooks, told a few select teachers they would actually miss them, gathered in as much cold-hard-cash as they possibly could from all their relatives, and spent at least one night absolutely determined to party-hearty until the sun came up.

No more will they be spending their noon hour in an over-crowded quad or a socially segregated school cafeteria where the cheerleaders, athletes, pseudo-intellectuals, and even the wannabe hoodlums all had their special little set-aside areas where they gathered to eat and talk over their common problems and experiences.

And maybe best of all, no longer will the hardcore unpopular – that unfortunate group of outcasts represented by the different, the shy and introspective, the truly smart, and the soon-to-be really successful – have to put up with a daily existence often defined by the cruel and insensitive.

For my money, high school graduation (and the four years leading up to it) is the most over-rated – and yet somehow most fondly remembered – youthful rite-of-passage of them all.

 “My senior year in high school was the best year of my life,” a friend of a friend recently told me with a nostalgic sigh.
 “Really?” I asked, kind of surprised that such a seemingly rational person's life had apparently peeked at seventeen. “How come?”
 “Well, for starters, I fell in love for the very first time. And oh, he was soooo dreamy.”
 “Now why do people do that?” I asked.
 “Do what?”
 “You know, use words that haven't crossed their lips in 40 years when they start talking about their high school days. I mean, when is the last time you actually used the word “dreamy” to describe anyone?”

“Well, he was dreamy! And we had soooooo much fun together. Didn't you fall in love when you were in high school.”
 “I'm afraid so, but I don't remember it being all that much fun, although it probably would have been a lot more enjoyable if her ex-boyfriend wasn't always trying to kill me.”
 “Oh, you were in a triangle?”
 “No, it was more like being in a bad Alfred Hitchcock movie where you're never quite sure if someone is going to jump into your shower with a knife.”
 “I don't understand.”
 “It's a guy-thing,” I assured her, seeing no need to go into the fact that for most young men, high school is about playing sports, trying to act cool, and avoiding being killed by either your girlfriend's x-boyfriend or someone else who can't stand you for no discernable reason.
 “I hate it when men do that!”
 “Do what?” I asked,
 “Start to talk about something – especially one of those so-called guy-things – and then just stop. Why do men do that?”
 “I don't do that.”
 “You just did!”
 “Well, all I was trying to say is that I think the high school experience is a little different for girls and guys.”
 “How so?”
 “Well, most of the girls I knew in high school were into things like getting good grades, meeting the right guy, going to the prom, getting along with their teachers, having slumber parties, cheering the team on to victory, yelling loud at spirit rallies, and smiling and saying ‘hi’ to everyone who passed them in the hall.”

 “So what were the guys into?”
 “Surviving.”
 “But you must have a few good memories from your high school days?”
 “Of course I do.”
 “Tell me the best one.”
 “Well,” I finally said after giving it some serious thought, “I think 25 cents-a-gallon gas certainly has to rank right up there near the top.”
 “The price of gas is one of your favorite high school memories?” she asked with amazement.
 “Absolutely! For instance, my best friend was really good at begging his dad for any extra change he might have in his pocket, and if his father was in a good mood and flipped us just a quarter, that would be enough gas for the two of us to drag K Street in downtown Sacramento all weekend long in my 53' Chevy.”
 “You once drove a 53' Chevy?”
 “Yep. It was ocean blue and it had these great-looking baby-moon rims. It used a couple of quarts of oil a week, but it sure looked cool!”
 “And you were a K-Street ‘cruiser’?” she asked with a smile.
 “So, tell me the truth. Did you actually ever pick up any girls doing that?”
 “Well, not that I remember,” I admitted, “but back then, all my best friend and I needed was a quarter's worth of gas for hope to spring eternal.”

Congratulations are in order to Ken Griffey Jr., who becomes the 6th player in Major League Baseball to hit 600 home runs in their careers. Ken Griffey Jr. name goes down in the history books along side Barry Bonds (762), Hank Aaron (755), Babe Ruth (714), Willie Mays (660) and Sammy Sosa (609).

Griffey Jr., 38-years-old, has hit home runs in 43 different ballparks against 29 teams including 15 career grand slams and home runs off 383 different pitchers including lefty David Wells, who he took deep eight times. He has hit 40 home runs or more in a season seven times and twice clubbed 50 plus home runs during a campaign. Can you guess which team Junior hasn't hit a home run against? If you guessed Cincinnati – you're a winner!

Griffey's career started in 1989 with 16 home runs at the tender age of 19 years and was the youngest player in baseball to reach the 300, 350, 400 and 450 home run plateau and was on pace to shatter all home run records.

Unfortunately, Griffey was plagued by a string of injuries, including season-ending injuries in 2002, 2003, and 2004. Worse yet for Griffey, the cumulative effects of the injuries lowered his bat speed, resulting in less power and fewer home runs. Injuries forced Griffey to miss 260 out of 486 games from 2002 through 2004.

Junior, who still has a few good years left in his bat and could easily surpass Willie Mays record and reach the 700 mark but he'll probably need another 4 years and steady job in the American League as a designated hitter to rest his weary legs.

NBA Championships

The NBA Championship series moves to the city of Angels for Games 3, 4 and 5 with the Boston "Three Party" having their way with Kobe and his Lakers. The best of seven series now switches to the best of five with the Celtics winning the first two games at home.

Paul Pierce is having the time of life against the Lakers and seems to be carrying the Celtics on his chest. Pierce, who sprained his knee in game one, led Boston with 28 points in game two. The Celtics defense is keeping Kobe off balance while frustrating and forcing the Lakers bench players into mental mistakes as they look to feed Bryant the ball down the stretch in the fourth quarter.

The pressure is on Los Angeles to win at home but Boston hasn't played well away from the Garden. The Lakers should win two of the three games at home to force game six to move back to Boston and set up the "Classic Game Seven" in Los Angeles. Don't you just love this game?

Korner Kicks

Tons of soccer action this month for fans with the 2008 Euro Cup and 2010 World Cup qualifiers beginning play around the world. ESPN is televising two Euro cup games live every day starting at 8:45 a.m. followed by a second game at 11:45 a.m. live from Austria or Switzerland, who are co-hosting the Cup that features the top players and national teams of Europe.

Also, the rest of the World's national teams are beginning their quests to reach the World Cup which will held in South Africa in 2010. With the beginning of 2010 FIFA World Cup qualifying just one week away, the U.S. Men's National Team played to an impressive 0-0 draw with No. 1-ranked Argentina in front of a record sell-out crowd of 78,682 fans at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

The US team played well especially after returning from Europe with a 2-0 loss at Wembley stadium in England followed by 1-0 loss in Spain last week. The United States team, which is currently ranked 21st in the World played Argentina to a close and competitive game unlike the Mexican National team which was trashed by Argentina 4-1 last Wednesday night before 68,000 pro-Mexico fans in San Diego.

The USA's world cup journey begins against Barbados in a home and away series starting on Saturday, June 15th at the Home Depot Center in Carson, Ca. followed by a game in Barbados on June 22nd while Mexico's National team begins their qualifying games on June 15th and 21st against hapless Belize.

Diamond Notes

Don't look now but the Giants (29-35) are creeping up on the first place Arizona Diamondbacks trailing the division leaders by only 5 games. Arizona has lost 12 of their last 17 games while the Giants are quietly winning games.

The G-Men sweep the Nationals in D.C. and are now headed to Colorado before they return home to host the "Battle of Bay" series this weekend against the cross town rival Oakland.

The A's (34-29), who are 4 games back of the Angels, are home this week hosting the New York Yankees before their Bay Area showdown with San Francisco this weekend.

The River Cats (39-25) lead the Southern Division by 5 games over Las Vegas are back on the road this week in Tucson before they return to the friendly confines of Raley Field for a weekend series against Tacoma.

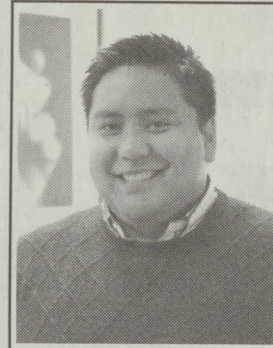

Between the Ropes

Boxing promoters Don Chargin brings back ESPN boxing to the Arco Arena on June 18th featuring featherweight title contender Roger Gonzalez of Chino (27-1, 18 knockouts) against Cornelius Lock of Detroit (17-3, 10 KOs) in the main event. Woodland native and former U.S. Olympian Vicente Escobedo (17-1, 11 KOs) will fight in the co-feature bout against an opponent yet to be named. Ticket prices are priced from $25 to $100.

Burt's devotion to his family is exemplified by the fact that his faithful companion, Doris, along with all his children, still live and love his adopted home of Port Angeles. His zest for life was shown by his penchant of exploring the great outdoors and his love of fishing on the high seas. His dedication to his heritage was always displayed by his frequent visits back to West Sacramento. Burt was a big man, but he had to be to accommodate such a huge heart and he will be sorely missed by anyone who knew him. His life left the world a better place.

Services will be held on June 21, 2008 in Port Angeles, WA.

'Graduates'

Wonderland Bilingual Day Care in Southport is one of about a half-dozen schools in the 'Universal Preschool for West Sacramento' program.

This month, it 'graduated' its first class.

The school advertises itself as bilingual, but teachers Jacquelin and Paul Martinez say not only do the kids know some Spanish and English, but also a little bit of American Sign Language.

TAGGED

A resident of Meadow Road, in West Sacramento's Park Boulevard area supplied this photograph of a graffiti incident that occurred early last week. The resident notified the police department – and most of the graffiti was removed the next day.

The incident happened shortly after an anti-gang injunction (which includes a curfew) went back into effect in late May.

Agreement on Indian center comes to council

West Sacramentans can get another look at the evolving plan to bring a state Indian museum and heritage center to the city's waterfront at a city council meeting June 18 at 7 p.m.

Maureen Pascoe of the city's redevelopment agency said details of the city/state agreement aren't finalized yet. But the agreement will describe the conditions under which the city will give the state 43 acres of land across from Discovery Park, for use as an Indian culture center and park.

The agreement will try to address residents' concerns about parking, traffic and security impacts, said Pascoe. But it won't provide an actual final design for the center.

"What we're doing is laying out a roadmap for how to get there," Pascoe told the News-Ledger. "The master agreement states that if we're satisfied with the design and if it addresses our concerns, then the state can exercise its option on the property. We've got two years to figure that out."

"What we're talking about is starting the design process," she added. "This is the beginning, not the end. Having this in place will allow the state to start planning in earnest. They will be able to come up with a reasonable estimate of the number of visitors and start planning to handle those visitors without impacting different neighborhoods."

One concession so far is regarding a possible parking facility near 5th Street and the proposed entrance to the center. The parking lot – if needed – won't be multi-story, said Pascoe.

The council meets at 1110 West Capitol Avenue.

I-5 shutdown: so far, so good

'Round One' of the I-5 closures has gone fairly smoothly for West Sacramento, as with most of the region.

Henry Serrano, Deputy Chief of Police for the city, said that a media blitz by CalTrans and other involved agencies helped get drivers' attention before the northbound lanes of I-5 in downtown Sacramento were closed for nine days.

"People either telecommuted, or shifted the start and stop times of their jobs, or took vacations, or whatever, but there were fewer cars," said Serrano. "We were very fortunate."

Serrano said that the city was ready with a special task force of a sergeant, four officers and parking enforcement personnel. The team was in place, able to respond to any problems that developed on West Sacramento surface streets as I-5 travelers looked for other ways into Sacramento or through it. The team saw no major problems.

Some residents reported seeing more traffic on West Capitol Avenue or Jefferson Boulevard during the closure, which ended Monday morning. Also clearly visible was a lot of traffic coming westbound on U.S. 50 from Sacramento, going past Harbor Boulevard and then taking I-80 north to I-5 north. Traffic visibly slowed near Harbor on U.S. 50 in West Sacramento during the closure.

Next on the schedule is the closure of I-5's southbound lanes in downtown Sacramento, beginning this Friday at 8 p.m. and ending at 5 a.m. on Monday the 22nd.

This may create a whole different set of challenges – and creative solutions – for commuters and other travelers.

"We're trying to guess what routes people will take," said Serrano. "This could be more impactful than the northbound closures. People should start to work early, especially if they plan to use the Tower Bridge gateway or Reed and I-80 into Sacramento."

More information on the closures is available at www.fixI-5.com.

OPINION

NEWS-LEDGER EDITORIAL:

'What's in a name,' & more

The right thing to do is keep the name of the old "Arthur F. Turner Branch Library" on Merkley Avenue after the old building is brought down and a new one erected.

Turner, a local landowner and developer, donated the Merkley Avenue land on which the library will continue to find a permanent home. That kind of generosity shouldn't be forgotten.

And speaking of names:

Next door to the planned new library building will be a new branch of the region's community college system. The "West Sacramento Center" of the Los Rios Community College District will face city hall across West Capitol Avenue. The branch will accommodate more students than can be served at the college's leased facility on Halyard Drive. It will bring more opportunities for both those early in their adult lives and those farther along. High school grads can begin their pursuit of a college education here, and older adults can pick up courses they need to train themselves better for their careers.

It's time to remember another name — or, in this case, a pair of names — when the new college center goes up.

The late Grace K. Ohlson is a former local school board member and trustee of the Los Rios Community College District. She was a famous local gadfly as well, familiar at the podium of many local city council and school board meetings. She and her husband, current resident John Ohlson, worked hard for civic improvement and for local education. Especially close to Grace Ohlson's heart was the community college system. Ever the Democrat (both with a capital "D" and a small one), she wanted high school grads to have a clear path to college, no matter what their income or their life goals.

The "Ohlson" name would make a fine adornment of some part of the new college branch — perhaps over the doorway of a computer lab or classroom. Somewhere close to the students.

Looking for a very, very part-time job with no pay but great job satisfaction? Consider volunteering for the Meals on Wheels program, which is looking hard for new blood. The program brings hot meals to shut-ins who otherwise may get little in the way of home-style balanced meals. By delivering the meals to their doors, volunteers also bring a little much-needed social contact to some of these folks who can't get out much.

A couple of your hours a few times a month could make a difference.

According to an unscientific survey, this result is just in:

The public place in West Sacramento most in need of a diaper-changing facility is the parking lot of the Starbucks complex on Enterprise Boulevard, just off of the freeway. Many are the occasions on which a minivan can be spotted parked there, fresh off the freeway, with the bare hind end of some unfortunate youngster hanging out the door awaiting a new wrap.

DINING, TRAVEL & ENTERTAINMENT

CRITIC'S CORNER

By D.N.A. Smith

"Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull"

Running time: 124 minutes
MPAA rating: PG-13

What does it say about a film that an hour into it, I had to pick up my Nintendo DS to play "Age of Empires" to stay entertained? I went into "Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull" with the lowest of expectations, and they were met.

The film takes place in the 1950s during the height of the Red Scare. An old friend of Indy's (John Hurt) has gone missing in Peru. Soviets are involved. And there is a frantic chase to see whether Indy or the Russkies will gain possession of a mysterious crystal skull that may hold the secret to a legendary city of gold — and the Roswell Incident.

Yeah. Let's just say there's a point in this movie where entertainment ends and George Lucas begins. And I don't mean that in a good way. The only way this plot could get dumber would be the inclusion of Jar-Jar Binks.

That said, Cate Blanchett was delicious. She really chewed up the scenery as the Soviet parapsychologist Irina Spalko. I was so hoping that at some point she'd refer to Harrison Ford and Shia LeBeouf as "Moose and Squirrel."

Harrison Ford also is fantastic. How could he not be? He knows that character inside and out, and his portrayal of the older, experienced Indiana Jones is perfect. Ford carries this creaky, convoluted and often ridiculous movie on his back and tries to inject a little class and humanity to this CGI-overladen mess.

I should add that it was a delight to see Karen Allen again, reprising her role as Marion Ravenwood. Despite more than a quarter century since her first appearance in "Raiders of the Lost Ark," Allen looks like she may have aged a week. Her performance is sparkling. You could tell she was having the time of her life working alongside Ford again.

Harrison Ford

The long and short of it is this: Three great performances, two spiffy chase scenes, and that's about it for the Good Parts. The rest is pretty boring or stupid. But it doesn't matter what I say about the film. It's going to make a bajillion dollars, and millions of people will see it for nostalgia's sake.

I truly hope you enjoyed it more than I did. And if you haven't seen it yet, wait for the DVD and rent it. I don't think it's worth paying full-price admission at a theater.

Q. I haven't heard much lately about Lindsay Lohan (not that I am complaining or anything). Has she gone into hiding, or is she just trying to keep a low profile since all her earlier troubles with partying and alcohol and the like? — Heather P., via e-mail

A. As of this writing, Lindsay has been trying to keep much of her personal life on the down low and is concentrating on her career. She guest-starred on the season finale of "Ugly Betty" and is scheduled to appear in a few more episodes next season. She also is slated to appear in the feature films "Dare to Love Me" and "Ye Olde Times."

Q. What would it take to get Kathryn Erbe of "Law and Order: Criminal Intent" to shampoo her hair and get it out of her face? She has this frequent "tic," in that she constantly tries to shake the hair out of her eyes. I try to count how many times she does this in an episode. It's very disconcerting! — Honey S., Fort Myers, Fla.

A. I really don't have an answer to your question, but I did want to print it because, believe it or not, I have received at least a dozen similar letters in the past few months. Hopefully the show's hairstylist will see this and make the necessary changes ... but I doubt it!

Q. I am a huge fan of "Sanford and Son" and wonder what happened to Demond Wilson, the actor who played Lamont Sanford. — Harvey B., Verona, Va.

A. Demond Wilson played the long-suffering son on "Sanford and Son" from its premiere in January 1972 until its final episode in March 1977 — during which time the show saw its star, Redd Foxx, walk off the set in 1974 after disagreements with the show's producers, only to come back later on in the next season. However, Demond did not appear in "Sanford," the short-lived attempt to revive the series. He also starred in 1982's "The New Odd Couple" and had guest spots on "Girlfriends" and "The Love Boat."

Demond, now 61, has spent most of his post-"Sanford" time devoted to God and his teachings. He became a minister in 1984 and founded the Restoration House in 1994, which offers spiritual guidance and vocation training to former prison inmates.

Q. Were actors Vic Morrow and Jeff Morrow related? — Herbert F., Galax, Va.

A. Vic Morrow ("Combat" and "The Bad News Bears") and Jeff Morrow (many Westerns of the '50s and '60s) were not related, although they did share more than just their last name. They both appeared in a version of "The Twilight Zone" as their final starring vehicle. Vic was tragically killed in 1982 on the set of "Twilight Zone: The Movie," while Jeff starred in a 1986 episode of "The New Twilight Zone," seven years before his death.

The Sugar Queen

By Sarah Addison Allen
(Bantam Books, $22)
Reviewed by Ealish Waddell

The last thing Josey Cirrini expects to find on the floor of her closet is a woman, and especially not Della Lee Baker. A brash and blowsy waitress, Della Lee is about as far away from meek Josey in lifestyle, class and personality as it's possible to get in their insular little Southern town, where their paths have seldom crossed.

Despite the weirdness of the situation, at first Josey is angriest at Della Lee simply for blocking access to her secret closet, the place where she stores her clandestine stash of candy and romance novels, and retreats from her self-imposed devotion to her manipulative, demanding mother. But she lets Della Lee stay, and having an observant, gregarious confidante in her closet soon exposes Josey to a new angle on her own life.

Employing both criticism and encouragement, Della Lee pushes Josey out of her comfort zones — into a friendship with another young woman with her own emotional dramas, into a flirtation with the mailman she's been crushing on secretly for years, and into a realization of her right to live her own life.

Della Lee has many secrets to share with Josey, not all of them pleasant. But as surprising connections are revealed among the varied aspects of Josey's gradually unfolding life, it's clear that Della's presence in Josey's closet is more than just chance.

"The Sugar Queen" is a joy to read, populated with the sort of well-rounded characters that you want to both hug and yell at, often at the same time. Using touches of magical realism, Southern Gothic, family drama and contemporary romance, author Sarah Addison Allen mixes up a sweet fantasy that ends on a supremely satisfying note.

Saucy Chicken Stir Fry

Stir-fry is the easiest way to get your veggies and to have something that is quick and easy. If you need to serve an extra body, just throw in a few more veggies.

- 3 cups purchased raw stir-fry vegetables
- 8 ounces skinned and boned uncooked chicken breast, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
- 1/2 cup Kraft fat-free mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon dried minced garlic
- 1 tablespoon reduced-sodium soy sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 2 cups cooked rice

In a large skillet or wok sprayed with butter-flavored cooking oil, cook vegetables for about 5 minutes or until just tender, stirring often. Remove from skillet. Add chicken pieces to skillet and cook for about 4 minutes or until tender. Add cooked vegetables. Mix well to combine. Stir in mayonnaise, garlic, soy sauce and ginger. Remove from heat. For each serving, place 1/2 cup rice on a plate and spoon about 1 cup chicken mixture over top. Serves 4.

HINTS: 1) 1 cup raw broccoli, 1 cup raw cauliflower, 3/4 cup carrots and 1/4 cup green onion may be used in place of purchased stir-fry vegetables. 2) Usually 1 1/3 cups uncooked instant or 1 cup regular rice cooks to about 2 cups.

On "My Boys," you are PJ's only real female pal. So, when men see two women dining together at a restaurant, they often assume the conversation is always about men. Any truth to that?

"No, the conversation is not ALWAYS about men, but often enough they somehow sneak in. I think men and women will always have conversations about each other, or how else can we learn how to deal with one another?"

Your character is a journalist on the show. So, if you were really one and could go back in time to cover the story of a food's invention, when would that have been?

"I would love to have been around for the creation of macaroni and cheese. My goodness, I don't think anything could taste better than pasta and cheese all baked into one!"

As a Philadelphia native, you must have a choice in cheese steaks, right? Pat's or Geno's? And how intense is that rivalry?

"I know that the rivalry is real, but I don't get involved because my favorite cheese steak restaurant is Pudge's in Jeffersonville. It's a neighborhood spot that's been around since I was a kid, and it's better than Geno's and Pat's combined."

How's the food on the set of "My Boys"?

"We try to have healthy food on the set. Lots of fruit, vegetable trays and yummy sandwiches. Yes, there are the trays of doughnuts and nachos, but I pretend not to see them."

Name a TV or movie star you'd give almost anything to have dinner with, and why.

"Barbra Streisand. She's the reason I fell in love with theater. Although if we ever did have dinner together, I'd probably faint in front of her before dinner was even served!"
